

Can Pujara stop Boddison creaming it?

Boddison is favourite

David Norman

THREE DAYS OF standing on a bench and urging students to vote may have been worth the effort for Adam Boddison who seems on course to become Students' Union President next year, the RaW exit poll predicting a resounding victory over all other candidates.

The poll, which correctly predicted all five Sabbatical results last Saturday, is compiled using information gleaned from voters as they leave the poll and shows Boddison 11% ahead of his closest rival with 32% of the vote. Second place in the exit poll is a closely fought contest with Pujara just ahead of Greg Jones, although both have 19% of the electorate's support.

The forecasted result is particularly poor for Emily Ransford. John Dubber, the current Union President personally backed her campaign and believed her to be the favourite. Union Council chair, Jon Wylie also had a poor showing, not making the final rounds of voting.

Despite their recognised accuracy and predictions of such a large margin, Boddison remains cautious. Speaking to the Boar, he said: "Everyone is going to make up their own mind on what the exit polls mean. I really haven't made up my mind of what to think of the polls.

Jamie Pujara also has his doubts and remains confident: "I'm not sure if I trust the exit polls, but I am more anxious now."

x: Candidates
y: Percentage of vote (round ten)

Round ten of RaW exit poll shows Boddison lead